In this collection, we present some of the greatest Canadiens stories ever told. These stories capture the team's unique spirit and tradition, and they are sure to entertain and inspire fans of all ages.

The Rocket's record-breaking night

On March 18, 1944, Maurice Richard scored five goals in a game against the Toronto Maple Leafs. This was a record-breaking performance, as no player had ever scored five goals in a single game in the NHL. Richard's performance helped the Canadiens to a 9-1 victory, and it cemented his place as one of the greatest players in hockey history.

Beliveau's brilliance

Jean Beliveau was one of the most complete players in hockey history. He was a gifted skater, shooter and passer, and he was also a great leader. Beliveau led the Canadiens to 10 Stanley Cups during his 20-year career, and he was named the NHL's MVP three times.

Lafleur's legendary goal

Guy Lafleur was one of the most exciting players to ever play the game of hockey. He was known for his incredible speed and skill, and he was a fan favorite in Montreal. In 1979, Lafleur scored one of the most legendary goals in Canadiens history. In Game 6 of the Stanley Cup Final against the New York Rangers, Lafleur skated through the Rangers defense and scored a goal that gave the Canadiens a 3-2 lead. The Canadiens went on to win the game and the Stanley Cup, and Lafleur's goal is still remembered as one of the greatest moments in team history.

Roy's heroics

Patrick Roy is one of the greatest goaltenders in hockey history. He led the Canadiens to two Stanley Cups in the 1990s, and he was named the NHL's MVP three times. Roy was known for his incredible reflexes and his ability to make big saves in key moments. In 1993, Roy made one of the most famous saves in Canadiens history. In Game 4 of the Stanley Cup Final against the Los Angeles Kings, Roy stopped a shot from Wayne Gretzky with his glove. The save helped the Canadiens to win the game and the Stanley Cup, and it is still remembered as one of the greatest saves in NHL history.
